

LANDSBAUM CENTER FOR HEALTH EDUCATION

RECEPTION 5:30 p.m. – 7:00 p.m.

The Landsbaum Center for Health Education, located at 1433 N. 6th 1/2 Street, will host our Thursday evening reception from 5:30 – 7:00 pm. The Landsbaum Center for Health Education offers unique opportunities for health improvement and team learning through partnership and multidisciplinary education. The building houses Union Hospital's Richard G. Lugar Center for Rural Health (formerly Midwest Center for Rural Health or MCRH), the West Central Indiana Area Health Education Center (AHEC), the second-year teaching program of the Indiana University School of Medicine - Terre Haute, and portions of Indiana State University's College of Nursing, Health and Human Services.

RHIC Simulation Center - Partners of the Rural Health Innovation Collaborative (RHIC) have developed a Simulation Center for the inter-professional education of health care professions students and providers. Simulation allows students to learn the art and science of patient interaction, decision making and clinical care skills using scenarios that occur in the real world. Simulations can use human actors who present themselves to students or health care providers with health issues or symptoms, electronic devices representing specific parts of the anatomy such as the colon, or sophisticated full-sized mannequins of the male and female adult, a child or infant. The mannequins can be programmed to take on a number of symptoms, conditions and complications and respond to interventions that students perform.
